FOREWORD

Indian Forest Act, 1927 is one of the oldest laws governing the forest in India, which has gone through a plethora of interpretations by the Indian Judiciary. There has always been a need for consolidation of various judgments pertaining to the Indian Forest Act, 1927, to better understand the legal framework and to arrest the forest offences. On the other hand, in todays Information Era, technology can enable access to structured and consolidated information to help evidence based policy making and informed decision making.

Recognising these trends, Indira Gandhi National Forest Academy has been in the process of training its probationers in the fields of Forest Law and outfitting them with state of the art computer and mobile based management tools. I am glad to know that Shri Arun Vignesh C S and Smt Divya Bharathi M, IFS probationers of 2016 batch, during their professional course at IGNFA have developed a web page to consolidate various judgments related to the Indian Forest Act of 1927 as a part of their elective paper. This web page will help the forest administration in better understanding and application of these laws in day to day work as well as in court cases. I would also like to complement our faculty member Shri Uttam Kumar Sharma, IFS (MP, 1999) for his inspiration and guidance in the development of the web page.

I am sure that the efforts made by the probationers through development of this web page for consolidation of legal informations related to forestry will be of great help to the forest departments of different states and all courts in delivering the rightful justice.

Law is an important tool in the protection of our precious natural resources. Our forests have greatly benefitefd by the pioneer forest law Indian Forest Act, 1927 which has been the guiding light for the enactment of several State laws . It is necessary for every forester to understand the major provisions of the Act to successfully manage the forests.

Since independence, Indian Judiciary has upheld the sanctity of Indian Forest Act 1927 by interpreting it in its true spirit. These interpretations from higher judiciary in favor of forests and forest department need to be made accessible to the field officers so that they can strengthen their arguments in courts. It has been my long time wish that a compilation of important judgments related to Indian Forest Act 1927 be made on a web based platform and I am happy that it has materialized through this webpage developed by Shri Arun Vignesh C S and Smt Divya Bharathi M. I sincerely hope this webpage remains dynamic and up to date as new judgments are delivered.

(Shri Uttam Kumar Sharma) Additional Professor, IGNFA
